while he still misses some of the deepest things in the part, plays it with fine variety and subtle nower. In technique, elocution and stagecraft it is a superior performance. Criterion audiences are inclined to resent Mr. Wyndham's appearce in mediæval costume instead of the concentional black coat, and find it hard to recondie themselves to a drama in which they are not laughing from beginning to end. His acting as Cesare in "The Jest," which is the joint of Mr. Louis Parker and Mr. Murray Carson, is strong and artistic, and reveals his versaility, especially at the close, when there is a tragic situation. Miss Mary Moore also does good work, and Mr. Loring Fernie as the mad minstrel, Orsino, imparts to his fantastic lines the effect of the refrain of a Greek chorus. play is ingenious and well written. It introduces, however, a comedy company in a romantic drama which is not a melodrama of the D'Artagnan type, but has a note of tragic earnestness and dignity, like "Cyrano." It was followed with breathless interest on the opening night, but the critics assume that it is no suited to its surroundings. THE CABINET SETTLES DOWN TO BUSINESS.

A RADICAL BUDGET COMMITTEE-FEELING AGAINST ENGLAND-DRAMA

AND SOCIETY.

[BY CABLE TO THE TRIBUXE]
Paris, Nov. 12.—The Dupuy Cabinet is now firmly seated in the saddle, having cleared the Fashoda hurdles and cleverly surmounted the preliminary Dreyfus obstacles. Each Minister is at last able to settle down to his best pace to look after the interests of his own department. The Finance Minister is determined to put through his progressive income tax in the face of violent reactionary opposition, and count upon the aid of the Budget Committee elected during Friday's session of the Chamber of Deputies and composed for the first time in the history of the Third Republic of a majority of Rad- | From The Indianapolis News. out-and-out Radicals, the other fifteen being money, and its salutary effect will be widely felt. Conservatives or moderate Republicans. The question as to what this Radical Budget Committee may do causes considerable comment in financial circles, for the Budget Commission, providentially arranged to counterbalance the inconvenience of the brief duration of Ministries, is practically emnipotent under the present French parliamentary system.

M. Lockroy, the Minister of Marine, is profiting by the silent but strong current of Anglophobia to push forward naval reforms with a will and perseverance worthy of Colbert. The young and energetic Admiral Fournier, Commander-in-Chief of the Mediterranean fleet and M. Lockroy's right arm, is organizing a permanent flying squadron, always to be kept up to the maximum war strength and constantly ready to "go anywhere and do anything" at twenty-four hours' notice. M. de Freycinet is scraping off the barnacles that have accumulated in the military administration, and, taking a leaf from the experience of his colleague, M. Lockroy, is putting young men to the front. M. Delcassé is striving to give greater vitality to the alliance with Russia, and has placed relations with Germany upon an exceptionally cerdial footing by a timely visit to Count Münster, the German Ambassador, during which he begged the representative of Emperor William to excuse the discources; of the Paris sensational press in its boorish attempt to involve his daughter, Mile, Marie de Münster, in the polem of the Dreyfus affair. Count Münster has been the German Ambassador in Paris for thir- From The Chicago Times-Herald. teen years, and when the Boulevard newspapers began to draw his daughter into the Dreyfus controversy the other day the veteran diplomatist had made up his mind to ask to be retired, but by M. Delcasse's tact an unpleasant incident has been avoided, and the Parislans now appreciate that Mile. Marie de Münster, who is a goddaughter of Emperor William I, has, by her personal influence, contributed on several occasions to smooth the relations between Paris and Berlin. It was at her suggestion, for instance, that Emperor William II set free the two French naval lieutenants arrested for esplonage at Kiel in August, 1894, and sent them back to France immediately after the assassination of President Carnot.

The impression prevails at the Qual d'Orsay that altogether too much importance is likely to be attached to the visit of the German Emperor and Empress to Carthagena, for it is well understood in diplomatic circles here that the intended visit is devoid of political significance. Verbal assurances that such is the case have already been made through the German Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the French Embassy at Berlin and also through the German Embassy at Paris, so that any sensational interpretations that Madrid, Paris and Berlin newspapers may deduce from the imperial cruise in Spanish waters are in official quarters, presumably also in Washington, well discounted.

The popular irritation against England has by no means subsided, and crops up now and then in the streets and cafes, and even at the theatres. Mild protests are made against characters on the stage who exhibit too aggressively the prevailing fashion for London-made coats,

"Les Petites Barnetts," a three-act farce by M. Paul Gavault, set to music by M. Louis Varney, was produced on Wednesday at the Varietes, well acted by M. Brasseur and Miles. Gailois Lavallier and Dieterle, the last-named, who is one of the youngest actresses in Paris, winning favor for her piquant drollery of diction. The operetta "Les Petites Barnetts" is based upon a plot strikingly similar to that of "Les Cinq Filles de Monsieur Castillon," which had a good run at the Gymnase years ago. It turns upon the adventures of five marriageable daughters and their father, who insists on their marrying in chronological order. Around this flimsy farce M. Varney has entwined some music in which there is nothing original except a jig in the third act, which is begun by the five actresses scated, then danced in Indian file, and finally in couples. There is also a catchy duet in the last act. This may outlive the operetta itself, which is saucy rather than witty, and which may live some weeks owing to the excellent way in which it is mounted and interpreted. "Déjanire," a Greek drama in four acts by the late M. Louis Gallet, with music by Saint-Saëns, which was brought out last August in the Pyrenees in an open-air arena, was produced at the Odéon last night. The three orchestras with their weird performance of harps and trumpets, were led by Colonne. It was a disappointment for those who had been present at the open-air performance, for within a theatre even of the dimensions of the Odéon the melodies of "Déjanire" lose their charms. This spectacular musical antique drama in blank verse is inadequately mounted at the Odéon. In of view was decidely mediocre, the verdict of with following Emperor William. The latter, it apthe Parisian critics is that the composer of "Samson et Dalila" and "Henry VIII" has not added to his reputation by "Dejanire," which nevertheless contains some remarkable effects, but can never become popular. The feature of the present theatrical season is the brilliancy of the little single-act plays, which just now are much in favor. "Lavrille," by Maurice Donnay, for instance, produced last night at the Théâtre des Capucins, made a decided hit. "Le Voleur," by Tristan Bernard, brought out also last night, is brimful of wit and action; "Nini Tremplin," by Bloch, the third one-act play successfully produced last night, is suggestive of Alfred de Musset's "Marrons du Feu," and was warmly applauded at the Nouveau Theatre.

A VICTORY FOR SOUND MONEY.

THE DISTRUST OF TAMMANY. From The Denver Republican.

The election of Theodore Roosevelt in New-York is attributable to both distrust of Tammany and the personal popularity of Mr. Roosevelt, it is a defeat for the Democrats and a rebuke to Tammany.

THE RESULT IN OHIO.

The election result in Ohio is exceedingly gratify-ing to the Administration and to its political friends, indeed, their victory exceeded the most sangulae hopes of the Republicans of the Presidential State themselves. This splendid testimonial must delight the heart of the President, it is an indersement both of his war policy and of his financial views. The Fall River News.

A VOTE OF CONFIDENCE.

From The Chicago Inter-Occan.

The Republicans have reclaimed from the Populists and Democrats two of the great States of the West, hold ell the Republican States by normal majorities, control the Legislatures wherever the election of a United States Secuator is at stake, and secure a good working majority in Congress. This was not an off year, as were 1822, 184, 1842, 1896 and 1894, but a year in which the people voted confidence in a Republican Administration. From The Chicago Inter-Ocean.

THE PRESIDENT SUSTAINED.

From The Kansas City Journal.

It is especially significant that Ohlo, the home of the President, should for the first time in such an election, go Republican, and should show gains over the vote of a year ago, and that Nebraska, the home of Bryan, should, in such an election, be restored to the Republican column. All of this means that the people of this Nation are with the President, approve of his peace and war policies, and are standing by the great United States movement. It is an object lesson in patriotism and it will not be lost upon the world. From The Kansus City Journal

A CHEERFUL OUTLOOK.

With a Congress in both branches thus in sympathy with the Administration there is no reason why the President should not convene it next March and at the earliest moment carry the will of the people into effect both in respect to monetary reform and to the issues of the war. Not since the Civil War has there been so felicitous an outlook for the American people in all things that tend to material and substantial prosperity as at the present moment.

TWO OUTCOMES OF THE CONTEST.

From The St. Paul Pioneer Press. From The St. Paul Pioneer Press.

These two outcomes of the contest—the continued maintenance of the Republican ascendancy in the House and the assured control of the Senate by a strong Republican Sound Money majority—are hy far the most important features of the Republican victory of Tuesday. They are a splendid popular indorsement of the Administration of President Mc-Kinley and are a welcome assurance that he will have the support of Congress and the country in the domestic and foreign policies in which he represents the best interests and the noblest aspirations of the American people. of the American people

SOME RESULTS OF ROOSEVELT'S ELECTION From The New-York Evening Post.

From The New-York Evening Post.

The advantage of the State having a Governor at Albany during the next two years who will surround himself with the best elements of his party rather than the worst can scarcely be over-estimated. That Colonel Roosevelt will do this no one who knows him can doubt. He began his career, laid the foundations of his reputation, by his strenuous and effective work as a legislator at Albany. He woo in his struggles because he had Governor Cleveland to sustain him. Now that he himself is to occupy the Governor's chair he is certain to hall with joy the opportunity which will be his to continue the work of his early manhood. Every legislator of good intentions and purposes will find in him not merely an ally, but a leader. The courageous will be given more courage, while the well-intentioned but weak-kneed will be braced up to better action than they would have the courage to undertake alone. A bad Governor, as we have known by experience, is all-powerful for evil with the Legislature, for only the most determined members venture to oppose his commands and wishes, knowing that if they do so their legislative plans will be thwarted and they themselves "turned down" at the next election. An honost Governor is equally powerful for good, especially if he have the faculty for enlisting the people on his side, as Colonel Roosevelt undoubtedly has

OBITUARY.

CLARA FISHER MAEDER.

The death of the venerable Mrs. Maeder, which occurred yesterday, at her home, in Metuchen, removes forever another of the memorable figures of the past, and again points the invariable melancholy moral of the flight of time. Mrs. Maeder,known on the stage and destined to live in theatrihistory by her maiden name of Clara Fisher,had long lived in domestic retirement, only acting now and then, had long survived her period and her fame, and had been almost completely forgot-ten. Her great day was about fifty years ago. when she was in the fulness of her powers and her charm, but when that day faded her renown seemed to vanish; for, although she continued eccasionally to appear, and, indeed, was acting as late as 1889, her identity with the famous Clara Fisher of the Park Theatre of 1827-'41 was seldom realized, and her performances usually passed un-

Clara Fisher was born in England, July 14, 1811. and while yet a child she evinced such extraorlinary aptitude for acting and such an eager desire for stage-life that her parents deemed it judicious to place her in the theatre, and on December 10, 1817, she made her first appearance, coming forth at Drury Lane, as Lord Filmnap, in an adaptation of "Guilliver in Lilliput." Her success was instantaneous and unequivocal, and from that time onward she enjoyed ample public favor and had a career of ever-increasing prosperity. A child on the stage is usually a tiresome object precedity cannot long please, and it soon exhausts self; but every rule har its exception, and Clara peared in all the important cities of Great Britain, peared at Drury Lanc, as Little Pickle. In 1827 she came to America, beginning her conquest of our public, at the old Park Theatre, New-York, on September II, that year, as Albina Mandeville, in the comedy of "The Will." From New-York she went to Philadelphia, and thence to Boston, and afterward she visited such of the Western books as those of J. N. Ireland, H. P. Phelps Smith, Walker Leman, Wemyss, Ludlow, W. B. Wood, and Colonel T. Aliston Brown. She sparkles in the pages of Clapp's Boston Stage, and, inwherever she appears in the dramatic chronicles, whether old or new, it is with a shimmer of light and a breeze of melody. Her popularity was prodigious. She was not, strictly speaking, a beauty, but she possessed a magic of enchantment, her blithe demeanor and her melting voice that defies all laws and captures everybody. Her songs were heard in every drawing-room; her most notable social events in the history of Ver-mont took place at Shelburne Falls this afternoon, no success in the American theatre precisely like

THE OPERA IN CHICAGO.

MARKED SUCCESS OF THE FIRST WEEK-ENTHUSIASM CREATED BY THE NEW SINGERS.

Chicago, Nov. 12 (Special).-Notwithstanding the adverse influences of inclement weather and popular excitement over election returns, the opening week of the grand opera season in Chicago has been a marked success. Chicago has buffeted with wind and rain to give proof of its devotion to Wagner and Gounod, and its appreciation of the ine organization of vocal talent which Maurice

Grau has brought to the Auditorium. The chief incidents of the week were the first appearances of Miss Suzanne Adams, M. Van Dyck and M. Saleza. Miss Adams was received with demonstrations of favor never exceeded in enthusiasm in Chicago, and her triumph was as great as a Chicago audience could make it. The greatest hit of the week was made hy M. Van Dyck, in Tannhäuser. It is doubtful if any tenor, not excepting Jean de Reszke, has ever had such a reception in the usually frigid Auditorium. M. Saleza, the French tenor, made a Romeo of the old school, but gave a much better account of himself when he appeared as Faust to the Marguerite of Miss Adams. Mme. Marcella Sembrich achieved a great triumph as Rosina and in "La Traviata," while Mme. Eames carried off the usual honors that are accorded this ever-popular artist as Elisabeth in "Tannhäuser" and Elsa in "Lohengrin." The chief incidents of the week were the first

A most significant dart is his order for two bottles of Hunyadi Japos water, which testifies a desire to maintain his health at its present high level, and effectually disposes of any lurking suspicion that the lone prisoner contemplates suicide.
